Concept Note

Azadi ka Amrit Mahotsava, the year long celebration that began on the completion of 75 years of Independence has given us a golden opportunity to look back and recall the sacrifices of the people who ensured our freedom and enabled us to breathe in free air. The struggle for India's independence is a wonderful account of how awakening dawned on the masses and how the Britishers had no choice but to leave the country bag and baggage. This became possible because of what can be termed as Bharat Bodh. The present National Symposium is an attempt to recall the contributions made by all sorts of people - the politicians, the social reformers, the litterateurs, the feminists, the farmers, and above all the masses. That's why we have enlisted a wide range of subthemes for this symposium. Since this symposium is of general interest, it will be conducted both in English and Hindi.
